

QUIET GRAIN MARKETS—PRICE CHANGES VERY SMALL.

NOTHING ENCOURAGING FOR BULLS OR BEARS.

Speculation Was Slow and Quiet and Price Changes Confined to Narrow Ranges.

OPEN MARKET.

Thursday Nov. 8, 1900. There was little that was of interest in nature developed to-day by the local speculative grain situation. The markets were quiet throughout most of the day, with no notable features or developments of any time. They were in fact slow and quieting, and there were some movements thus usual of an intercession meeting. The speculators' quiet manifested during the entire day was largely reflected in the conditions existing in influence upon the situation which were to the fact that the basis of the basis declined, both sales being favored at times, though not sufficiently to move price decisively by either side. Price fluctuations were narrow and for the most part wide apart and very uninteresting, and the strength and weakness of the market of a milk and water kind. Naturally, under these circumstances, all operations were extremely light and wholly uneventful. When came in for most attention to-day, but that not superior to a very uninteresting market was had all the way through. It being evident that because of an intercession meeting, the strength was entirely lost, in twofold manner of a milk and water kind. Naturally, under these circumstances, all operations were extremely light and wholly uneventful.
